4,300 Students Vote Honour To Baruch For Services To N.Y.

Bernard Baruch, seventy-seven-year-old statesman, financier and philanthropist, received the Lincoln Medal at the Abraham Lincoln High School, Ocean Parkway and Avenue K, Brooklyn, N.Y., for "outstanding services to the City of New York."

Mr. Baruch's contribution to research in physical therapy and rehabilitation for the treatment and rehabilitation of cripples was the basis of the award, but his many achievements as adviser to Presidents and member of the United Nations Atomic Energy Commission were recited by Gardner B. Mason, principal, and Clifford Hoffman, who spoke for the students.

Mr. Baruch was chosen for the four-hundredth award — a bronze medal bearing Lincoln's profile — of the 4,300 students. To accompany a program of Southern melodies and dramatic recitations by students were arranged, and the auditorium was crowded with students and parents. Borough President John Cashmore made the formal presentation and pointed out that it came from one of the great high schools in the world's greatest borough.

Clifford Hoffman told how Mr. Baruch's father, Dr. Simon Baruch, had specialized in physical therapy and how Mr. Baruch, motivated by sympathy for his fellow men in New York, established the Baruch Committee on Physical Medicine with a $1,000,000 endowment to carry on its work. Thousands of children crippled by the infantile paralysis epidemics, or by accidents, or by birth defects, have been helped to lead useful lives.

Mr. Baruch said he was so deeply touched by the honor it was difficult for him to speak without emotion. Free of the bigotry, intolerance of the Middle Ages, he said he had been taught by his parents in South Carolina during the reconstruction days after the Civil War, that there would have been less of these if people had lived.

"We have suffered from intolerance, bigotry and injustice," he said. "I never would permit prejudice to embitter me in my attitude toward other people. Do not let prejudice embitter you toward life or toward your fellow man."

Then he told the students that the recipe for success in life is to "do the best you can in any job you happen to occupy." He paid tribute to "this great mother, this quick-rewarding country of ours," and reminded the students that "though we have some faults, here every man and woman is better off than any one in similar circumstances in any other country.

"People criticize us, but who would want to go to those other pastures that are not so green," he said.

Among previous recipients of the medal, first presented to Samuel Seabury in 1934, were Thomas E. Dewey, Fiorello H. La Guardia, Robert Moses, Paul Robeson and Eleanor Roosevelt, who received the citation for 1946. Others chosen have been Dr. William H. Park, Lillian D. Wald, Walter Damrosch,

WAS FIRST NATIVE-BORN GOVERNOR GENERAL

Sir Isaac Isaacs, Australia's first native-born Governor General, died at Melbourne at the age of 92.

Sir Isaac Isaacs, the son of a tailor, was Chief Justice of Australia when, on Dec. 2, 1930, he was appointed Governor General in succession to Lord Stonehaven. Under the more complete independence of the British Dominions, the appointment was made, without any reference to the Government of the United Kingdom. The King did not even know Sir Isaac by sight.

A long and distinguished career preceded the appointment. Admitted to the Victoria Bar in 1880, Sir Isaac was a member of the Victorian Legislative Assembly, 1892-1901; a member of the House of Representatives of the Australian Commonwealth Parliament, 1901-6; Attorney General of Australia, 1905-6; Justice of the High Court of Australia from 1906 to 1930, when he became Chief Justice.

School Bars Novels On Anti-Semitism

Two best-selling novels attacking anti-Semitism have been barred from the Library of De Witt Clinton High School, the Bronx, New York, on the grounds that one allegedly contains immoral passages and that the other gives offense to the Roman Catholic Church.

This became known when Dr. John V. Walsh, principal of the all-boys high school, one of the largest in the city, acknowledged that on the advice of the school's librarian he had banned "Gentlemen's Agreement" by Laura Z. Hobson and "Focus" by Arthur Miller.

At the Board of Education, 110 Livingston Street, Brooklyn, Frederic Ernst, associate superintendent in charge of the academic high school division, said he agreed "reluctantly" with the principal's action. Referring to "Gentlemen's Agreement", which has been made into a motion picture, Mr. Ernst said:

"I read the book the day after it came out and said to myself, 'This is made to order for the high schools.' And then came several fairly light sex passages and I realized that we just couldn't have it."

Dr. Walsh disclosed that the novels had been offered by a teacher in the school as a gift to the students' library. The principal said that to avoid any controversy he had appointed a committee of five teachers "representing a cross-section of the faculty" to read the books and to recommend action on them by Feb. 20.

Dr. Walsh declared "Gentlemen's Agreement" attacked "very little importance to, and makes light of, [illegible] relations and we [illegible] school protested against the ban on the novels, Dr. Walsh said, but he told them that "in a high school where we are dealing with impressionable young people we have to be careful about the kind of books we put into the library."

Mr. Miller, whose novel "Focus" was published by Reynal & Hitchcock in November, 1945, is also the author of the play, "All My Sons", which won the Critics Circle award of 1946-47 as the best American play of that season. He was reported to have sailed aboard the America for a six-week tour of Europe.

Mrs. Hobson refused to comment on the action taken against her book. Her secretary said it was Mrs. Hobson's "firm belief that in a case such as this the author should not be heard from." Richard Simon, president of Simon & Schuster, publishers of "Gentlemen's Agreement," said the matter "seems to belong in the tempest-in-the teapot department." He estimated that 700,000 copies of "Gentlemen's Agreement" had been sold in all editions since it was published in February, 1947.

A spokesman at the Board of Education explained that neither novel was included on the official list of books approved for school libraries. He added that in cases where a book was submitted as a gift to a school library, the principal "can refuse it if he has good and sufficient reason or he may accept it if he sees fit."

Says U.S. Arms Policy Aids Arabs

The Democratic whip of the House told a crisis conference of the American Zionist Emergency Council at Washington that the American embargo on arms to Palestine is "tantamount to arming the Arabs to attack Jews and the authority of the United Nations, while preventing the Jews from receiving arms to defend themselves and thus defend the United Nations."

The Democratic leader, Representative John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, addressed the representatives from thirty-five states, as one of their own spokesmen, Dr. Emanuel Neumann, charged that current British policy aims to leave Palestine in a state of chaos and exposes it to all the horrors of an avoidable war.

"It is not only delivering the Jews of Palestine defenseless to this horror," said Dr. Neumann, president of the Zionist Organization of America, "it is stabbing the United Nations in the back. Such a policy the conscience of America condemns and rejects with disgust. Such a government, sabotaging the United Nations and its decisions, is not entitled to backing, support and assistance from the United States unless and until it mends its ways."

British policy, the Zionist leader said, is based on a determination to prove that the United Nations partition decision is unworkable. Pursuing that policy, he alleged that the British have taken the following "obstructionist" moves

U.S. Interfaith Survey To Show DP Wanted

The Joint Council on Resettlement of Displaced Persons announced its plans for a nation-wide survey of resettlement openings for the 100,000 persons in displaced persons camps in central Europe, who are expected to enter the U. S. when Congress passes the Stratton bill or its equivalent.

The plans were made public at a press conference at the Hotel Vanderbilt, presided over by Dr. Joseph P. Chamberlain, professor of public law, Columbia University, chairman of the joint council. The three religious faiths co-operating in the Council's plans were represented by Dr. C. E. Krumbholz, Church World Service (Protestant); Edward M. O'Connor, National Catholic Resettlement Council, and Joseph E. Beck, United Service for New Americans (Jewish).

Preliminary returns from hundreds of communities have shown a response which Dr. Chamberlain described as very gratifying. He produced, as an example, a letter from a farmer in Ohio, who said he had a house on his farm which he would be glad to offer rent free for five years to any displaced person who was law-abiding and industrious. Similar letters had come from many communities, he said, where the need for skilled workers promised a welcome to the prospective immigrants.

All three representatives emphasized in turn their belief that the U. S. could absorb the expected 100,000 persons each year for four years without disrupting the economic situation or straining housing facilities. The effort would be to assist the immigrants [illegible] pointed out, presumably only the 500 would be employable males, the others their wives and children. Many of the women could be expected to work also as domestics.

Dr. Chamberlain said the co-operative effort by the three religious groups had come about because of the anxiety expressed last year by members of Congress lest the 100,000 displaced persons be a public burden.

"We feel," he said, "that if the religious people in America aren't interested in assuming moral and humanitarian responsibility, who else will be? In the local communities we are forming committees in which other groups, such as labor and industrial leaders will co-operate. We are merely supplying the nucleus."

Actual operation of the program depends, it was pointed out by Dr. Chamberlain, on passage by the Congress of legislation admitting an increased number of displaced persons, preferably on a non-quota basis. Pending that development the three agencies in the council are concentrating on a fact-finding survey through their local committees and groups to answer the question most frequently asked by legislators: What is going to happen to the DP's after they are admitted?

To this query, Dr. Joseph E. Beck, executive director of the United Service for New Americans, pointed to the record of receiving and resettling DP's that has been accomplished in recent years.

"The plans we are announcing today," he said, "are merely an expansion of a program already carried on successfully here for a number of years. The job is not an overwhelming one. It can be done without upset to our economy and without creating hardship as far as local employment and housing are concerned."

Speakers emphasized that their program was non-denominational and would constitute the greatest example of interfaith action in welfare work ever undertaken in America.

45 Unanimous In One World Award To Einstein

Dr. Albert Einstein was named as the winner of the 1948 One World Award, which was established in 1944 in memory of Wendell L. Willkie to carry out his concept of "one world".

The announcement was made by Jacques F. Ferrand, executive secretary of the One World Award Committee, at a reception in honor of Sir Norman Angell, British economist and 1933 winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, at the Astor. In naming the physicist, Mr. Ferrand noted that the designation had been made unanimously by the award committee of forty-five persons.

The presentation will be made to Dr. Einstein, who was not present when the announcement was made, at Carnegie Hall on April 27. It is expected that Dr. Einstein, who won the Nobel Prize in 1922, will not take advantage of the opportunity to travel around the world, which the award entitles him to. He will be sixty-nine on March 14.

The text of the citation accompanying the award follows:

"Albert Einstein is the 1948 selection for the One World Award because he has brought to the world more than a new conception of the cosmos. In an age in which the ivory tower was the accepted intellectual home for the scientist, he recognized that the scientist, like every man, is involved in the fate of mankind, and cannot avoid taking a stand on the great moral issues of the time.

"Long before Nazism came to power, he had expressed in interviews, articles and speeches, his world citizenship, and his hatred of militarism, dictatorship and violence. He has firmly maintained this attitude throughout the years, and has always been ready to lend his unequaled prestige to the causes he identifies with the cause of mankind.

"The press, the radio and the motion pictures have spread his ideals — which are the ideals of One World. It is [illegible]

A.J.C. Scores Proposed View On Aliens

The American Jewish Congress criticized proposed regulations that would place new restrictions on the movement of foreign visitors to the United States.

In a statement addressed to the Department of Justice Immigration and Naturalization Service, attorneys for the Congress said that a proposed amendment to the Code of Federal Regulations would mean "that a person coming to this country either permanently or temporarily, must be viewed with suspicion and treated as one whose sole purpose is to reap selfish benefits at the expense of the American people."

"The change in the rules would require prospective visitors to the U.S.," the Congress asserted, to pledge themselves in advance not to pursue "any purpose not specifically authorized by immigration officials."

The Congress charged that the [illegible] visitors being denied visas on political, antipathy and place them in a "quasi-criminal" status.

He is the grandson of Mrs. M. Bogante, Park Avenue; and of Mrs. B. Cohen, Jeanne Mance Street. At a kiddush, with about one hundred guests, at the Synagogue, those assisting in serving, were: Mesdames S. Kaushansky, D. Hyams, P. W. Cohen, and B. Weiner, all aunts of Irwin Robert. The following evening, there was a dinner dance at the Synagogue. Mr. and Mrs. H. Berger, uncle and aunt of Irwin Robert, of New York; and Miss Rose Ginsberg, of Toronto, Ont., his cousin, were present.

Miss Edith Goodman, of Windsor, Ont., formerly of Montreal, fiancee of Bernard Sheffman, of Saint John's, Newfoundland, spent some time in Saint John's, the guest of her fiance's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. Sheffman. On her return by plane she stopped in Montreal, and was entertained at a luncheon in the Corinthian Room of the Mount Royal Hotel by Mrs. Samuel Baizer, McEachran Avenue. The hostess wore a gray suit with green accessories, and a corsage of yellow roses; Miss Goodman, a gray suit, with brown accessories, and a corsage of yellow roses. Those present were: Misses Edith Black, Claire Shinder, Esther Baizer; Mesdames Rose Black, M. Shinder; and Jerry Baizer. The table was centred with spring flowers.

Mrs. J. Friedman, Laval Avenue, entertained twenty-five guests at tea at the Queen's Hotel, in honour of Miss Molly Feldman, Clark Street, fiancee of Teddy Abramovitch. Mrs. J. Friedman wore black crepe and lace-trimmed dress, with lace gauntlets, and a corsage of American Beauty roses; Mrs. W. Feldman, mother of the bride, a gray dress with sequin trimming, black hat and a corsage of American Beauty roses; and the honoree wore a black crepe dress, with pink net yoke, gray and pink hat, a corsage of pink carnations at the waist. The table was decorated with spring flowers, and tall white candles.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Pervin, Villeneuve Street West, were entertained by their children at a surprise forty-second anniversary dinner. The table was decorated with mixed spring flowers, candle-sticks, and a three-tiered wedding cake, and gifts were presented to Mr. and Mrs. Pervin by their children. Mrs. Pervin wore a black crepe dress, with lace insert trimming and ... Pervin and daughter, Elaine; Mr. and Mrs. I. Pervin; Mr. and Mrs. A. Mendelsohn and children, Sandra and Irwin; Mr. and Mrs. H. Rosenberg and children, Pearl, Martin, Roslyn, and Charna; and Miss Lilly Pervin.

Mrs. H. Mendelsohn, Fairmount Street West; Mrs. S. Hodess, Esplanade Avenue; and Mrs. Morris Solomon, Laurier Avenue, entertained one hundred and eighty guests at a linen shower and card party, at the Bucharest, in honour of Miss Sheila Shuter, bride-elect of March 14, fiancee of Milton Mendelsohn. Mrs. Mendelsohn wore a black crepe dress, with a corsage of red roses; Mrs. Hodess wore a black print dress, and corsage of white roses; Mrs. Solomon wore a black print dress, with a corsage of white roses; Mrs. H. Shuter, mother of the honoree, wore a black printed jersey dress, and a corsage of red roses; and the honoree wore a pale blue dress, pink feather hat, and corsage of red and pink roses with lilies-of-the-valley. The table was arranged with candlesticks and flowers.

Mrs. F. Pistreich, Clark Street, gave a tea in honor of her only daughter, Sylvia, whose marriage to Saul, only son son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Morris, St. Urbain Street, takes place on June 22, at Beth David Synagogue. About ninety guests were present. The table held a centrepiece of mixed spring flowers and colored tapers. Mrs. Pistreich wore a black silk print suit, with long sleeves and a high neckline, which was draped on the side. Miss Pistreich wore a black silk print dress, with a high neckline and long sleeves. Those who poured were: Mesdames L. Morris, mother of the groom-elect; H. Fleisher, sister of the groom-elect; J. Rosenzweig, aunt of the bride; A. Forman, cousin of the bride, S. S. Feiner, P. Fixman, and Miss Sylvia Pistreich, cousin of the bride. Assisting in serving were Mesdames R. Pistreich, sister-in-law of the bride; S. Wasserman, and Miss Doris Cammy. The honoree was presented with a cheque.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Bloom, of Point St. Charles, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of their son, Bernard, who was called to the Reading of the Law at Chevra ... synagogue. At the reception, a candle-light procession of thirteen couples was headed by Mr. Dworkin, and Mrs. B. Sacks, cousin of Bernard; Mr. and Mrs. N. Dworkin, Mr. and Mrs. N. Ghilcig, Mr. and Mrs. P. Sacks, Miss Mona Dworkin and her fiance, Jack Abrams; Gordon Wolfson, Mr. and Mrs. S. Ghilcig, Mr. and Mrs. P. Dworkin, Mr. and Mrs. A. Guben, Mr. and Mrs. J. Wolfson, Mr. and Mrs. O. Dworkin, Mr. and Mrs. S. Olshansky, all uncles and aunts of Bernard; and Rita Bloom, sister of Bernard. The host and hostess and the bar-mitzvah boy followed with Eillen, his sister, and Manuel, his brother, who carried the Talith. Mrs. Bloom wore a maroon floor-length gown, studded with silver beads and a corsage of roses. Rita and Eillen Bloom were similar dresses of taffeta, with white satin, and flowers.

Helping Jewish Farmers To Be Successful

By Gabriel Davidson, Of The Jewish Agricultural Society

Every war in which the United States has been engaged was followed by a trend to the farm. There are strong indications that World War II will be no exception. Since VE Day and VJ Day, and even before, veterans, former war workers, displaced white collar folk, including refugees, have been coming to The Jewish Agricultural Society to discuss the advisability of taking up farming as a means of livelihood. Only a few have had a farm background. Most know no more about farming than what they read in bulletins and real estate prospectuses, if that much. How should the latter be advised?

It cannot be gainsaid that the trained man has a decided advantage over the man without training or background. But it does not follow that the untrained man is doomed to failure. Were training and background so absolutely essential many Jewish farmers would have been turned aside and Jewish farm communities would be without some of their most progressive members. Nor would there now be rooted in the soil several thousand refugees who came to their farms untrained, soft-handed, some middle-aged and over.

Schooling is not to be disparaged. But how can the man who is no longer a youngster, the veteran, for instance, who emerges from the army at the age of thirty or more, who is either married or contemplates marriage, who cannot afford the time for the education generously offered by the GI Bill of Rights — how can this man gain access to the land? Or how can the displaced non-veteran afford the time and the money? Through sheer necessity, the Society was forced to find an answer in reversing the process of teaching and settlement, settling the man first and bringing the [illegible] right on his own farm.

Forty or fifty years ago, governmental educational aids were still in their infancy and where available, were designed largely for the already established farmer, not for the raw recruit. Furthermore, there was the language barrier. The Jewish farmer needed something more than government bureaus could be expected to accord. To meet the need, the Society inaugurated a system of services which in time came to take in virtually every phase of farming and every aspect of farm life.

The chief educational instrument is the individual visit, possible only in the more populous Jewish farm districts, whereby instruction is carried direct to the man on the farm by travelling teachers picked for their scientific training, their pedagogic ability, their temperamental fitness and their Jewish background. Incidentally, the Society's itinerant instruction antedated by several years the systematic agricultural county agent work made possible by congressional enactment in 1914.

These teachers go from farm to farm, see the farmer's problems, point out mistakes, suggest improvements. But they do more than impart technical knowledge. They build up a relationship much closer than that which ordinarily exists between teacher and pupil. This is of special importance to new farmers but even the advanced farmer is not so proficient that he cannot benefit by an occasional suggestion from an expert agriculturist.

Let us take a close-up of an extension man's job. An extension man, as one of them puts it, differs from a specialist who is presumed to know more and more about less and less, in that the extension man knows less and less about more and more. He is a sort of super answer man. He is called upon to answer multitudes of questions, such as the latest in New Castle disease, the use of hormones for fattening roosters, sulfa drugs in the treatment of mastitis, DDT in farm buildings and insecticides, the latest [illegible] of fruit and vegetable varieties, up to the minute market quotations on grains and other farm commodities, the most recent rulings of the OPA, the latest pronouncements on agricultural policy by the Secretary of Agriculture, the probable effect of atomic energy on farming, and how to prepare income tax reports.

This is easy. All he has to do is to read the agricultural press—The American Agriculturist, the Rural New Yorker, the New England Homestead, Country Gentleman, National Agriculture, Poultry Tribune, Poultry Science, Cackle and Crow, Hoard's Dairyman, Market Grower, The Poultryist and last but not least The Jewish Farmer. Then, if he has time left to go through the stream of bulletins coming off the presses of the Department of Agriculture and the various State Agricultural Departments, the extension man has nothing to fear.

In the course of his daily rounds, you will find this answer man in feed rooms and in storage houses, in chicken coops and in barns, in field and in gardens, dispensing his wares. You will find him advising on how to feed wet mash to chickens, ensilage to cows. You will find him demonstrating how to cull out non-layers and when and how to vaccinate. You will find him recommending the varieties to be planted in the home garden, how and when to spray and to apply fertilizer.

You will find him suggesting the insulating material to be used for the ceiling and walls of coop or barn, or methods to control heat and ventilation. You will find him giving instruction in the treatment of the common poultry and animal diseases. Again, this service is especially useful to new farmers and is the most satisfying because results are direct and discernible.

A case in point. Four years ago the Society helped a maker of precision instruments to locate on a Connecticut farm. On his first visit the Society's extension man found the newcomer ready to give up in despair. "Why did some of my chickens die? Why do they pick at one another? Why do they roost on the floor and in the nests instead of on the roosts provided? How can my water pipes be kept from freezing, my chimneys from smoking? How can I keep rats out of the feed room?"

This case had to be treated with patience and understanding and demanded frequent visits and precise instructions. The distraught novice was taken on visits to other farms, to farmers' meetings, and introduced to members of the State College extension force. Today this very man tops the list of eighty-five farmers. His eggs are known for their perfect pack, freshness and cleanliness and sell at a premium. He is the only poultryman in his state who has complete and dependable figures on the cost of production of a dozen eggs from week to week during the past [illegible] years, and College economists point to the perfection of his record keeping. As might be expected, this

Emil M. Sostman, eighty, New York buyer for the May Department Stores from 1898 until his retirement in 1938, died at his home there. During his career he is believed to have supervised purchases of more than $1,000,000,000 worth of retail goods.

A native of Germany, Mr. Sostman came to the United States in 1886 and worked for merchandise companies in Savannah, Georgia, and Memphis, Tenn., before joining the May stores as executive head of the Sostman Mercantile Company, the organization's New York buying office.

He was a founder and former vice-president of the Association of Buying Offices. In 1941 Mr. Sostman received a special award from the Secretary of the Treasury for assistance in the sale of war bonds. He was a trustee of the National Jewish Hospital, in Denver, honorary president of Temple Beth Miriam, at Long Branch, N.J., and a member of the American Arbitration Association.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Clementine Marx Sostman, and a sister, Mrs. Rosalie Marx.

HELPING JEWISH FARMERS TO BE SUCCESSFUL

farm is a model of cleanliness and efficiency.

Another instance. A former textile manufacturer from Austria, in his upper fifties, whose several attempts at adjustment had failed, settled on a farm in Massachusetts. This man had never done physical work. His wife was more at home with violin and bow than with rake and hoe. In their helplessness they shared their fears and anxieties with the Society's advisor, who marked the case for special attention. He guided them step by step, and encouraged them to buy hammer and saw to make minor repairs to the barn and farm buildings. How proud they were to behold the first fruits of their labor —eggs from their chickens and vegetables from their garden. Today the farm yields a comfortable livelihood and is a source of deep satisfaction to a couple who just a few short years ago felt beaten to the earth.

Often the extension man encounters a "good neighbor policy" which, laudable in intent, is harmful in practice. A new farmer had been given the initial instructions and admonished to write or telephone in case of trouble. When the extension man, on a later visit, entered the chicken house, he was nearly choked by the odor of turpentine. The farmer explained that a neighbor had advised him to mix turpentine in the grain as a prophylactic against worms. Examination at the State College Laboratory failed to disclose any trace of worms. This farmer paid for his neighbor's advice in the loss of production. Good neighbors are a blessing, but indiscriminate, blind acceptance of a neighbor's say-so is discouraging to the extension man and often costly to the farmer.

Planning a production program is another service frequently called for. "What should I plant? What shouldn't I plant? Should I raise broilers this year? Should I replace the sluggish layers with young pullets? Should I buy a few fresh cows?" Here the wanderlehrer treads on dangerous ground. He cannot predict weather, disease, markets, with certainty. He sits down with the farmer to weigh the pros and cons.

Last year a farmer was offered $3,000 for the lease of his potato and tobacco farm for the crop year and was tempted to accept. The extension man reasoned that, if the other fellow expected a profit after paying $3,000, the farmer would not take much risk in raising the crops himself. In the fall the farmer proudly opened his books to show that he had earned a net income of $7,500 by taking this sensible advice.

Not all cases have happy endings and the man on the field must be prepared to face disappointments. The keenest analysts, the wisest prophets, the surest intuitionists are sometimes mistaken. Yet the work must go on. The operator of a large poultry plant was doing quite well when, lured by big profits in broilers, he decided [illegible] white. He sold his layers, tore out roosts and nests, installed heat and took in 30,000 broiler chicks. By the time these birds were ready for sale, the broiler market fell and the chickens were sold at less than cost of production. Fortunately the farmer was well established and could stand the loss.

An important duty of the travelling teacher involves the matter of purchases. He must advise, and often arrange through the Society's central purchasing division, the purchase of incubators, brooder stoves, dairy equipment, farm machinery, seeds, fruit trees, fertilizer, spraying material, baby chicks and dairy cows. The cows may develop disease, the chicks may become poor layers. Of course, the fault is seldom the farmer's. It is that of the adviser. But that is the responsibility which he must assume.

New farmers have a tendency to buy materials they do not really need and it is the business of the man in the field to veto many items. It goes without saying that he must keep himself posted on prices, quality, and sources of supply. The farmer's bible—the Sears Roebuck catalogue—is on his list of required reading.

Allied to the field of purchase is work with farmers' cooperatives, many of which were formed to reap the benefit of pooled purchases. Not so long ago a man from the Society accompanied a committee of "cooperators" to Canada to help select high grade registered cows, and when feed was short the Society's representative in Chicago travelled to Iowa to ferret out sources of essential feed ingredients.

The extension agent also acts as organizer, educational adviser, cooperative consultant and moderator. In emergencies he must be prepared to assume managerial duties. He must be resourceful, understand group psychology, be willing to give freely of his time to attend board meetings, executive meetings, membership meetings — incidentally also to make himself available for individual consultation after adjournment. He is often the busiest man at such meetings.

There are also some extra-curricular items on the wanderlehrer's agenda. Living as he does in a farm community, he is invited to social functions, weddings, bar mitzvahs, and asked to address Chanukah and Purim parties. He is called upon to act as arbitrator in family disputes and now and then to find a young man or girl to marry the farmer's charming daughter or worthy son. From this one can gain some picture of how this peripatetic teacher spends his time. To keep abreast of the procession, he must attend conventions, county and state fairs, farm and home weeks, nutrition schools, breeder schools, and similar events.

This visitation scheme is by no means the sum total of the Society's extension service. It was selected for detailed consideration because it is the instrument which is the most direct and effective in getting results. The Society conducts night agricultural classes in New York and Chicago, maintains a purchasing division, publishes a monthly farm magazine and timely leaflets, maintains a bureau for consultation in person or by correspondence. It holds regional conferences, local meetings, displays exhibits, shows movies and arranges a variety of educational demonstrations.

[illegible] and mediation breaks in which the Society has brought into play every form of public health education. Likewise an employment division which was originally conceived, not as a placement bureau per se, but as a medium to train Jewish youth for future farm ownership or the more advanced agricultural positions.

Let it be remembered that an answer man — this one a settlement specialist—had worked with our farmer in his pre-farm days. This phase was discussed in an article "Guidance in Jewish Farm Settlement", Jewish Social Service Quarterly March 1944. There is traced the intricate process whereby a city man is turned into a farmer. In this process the farm loan played an indispensable part where a man could not have gotten started without it. But even this financial transaction has an educational strain running through it. The borrower receives a lesson in credit and in its proper use. Not all the Society's farm loans are "settlement" loans. They are available to already established farmers on securities not acceptable to the general run of lending agencies. This service has no geographical limitation. The Society has made loans in forty states.

Finally, the Society is sometimes called upon for types of help which really do not come within its realm and which do not lend themselves to categorical listing — obtainment of medical and hospital care, Americanization, and naturalization, arbitration, interfaith cooperation, adjustment of family quarrels, composition of partnership disputes, juvenile delinquency, etc., etc. — in short, problems as many and as diverse as human relationships.

Who are our Jewish farmers? They are essentially middle class men and, save for the new generation that is growing up, drawn from cities, attracted to the farm not to accumulate wealth but because the farm way of life appeals to them. Their farms range in size from less than an acre devoted to green house crops, to ten or twenty acre poultry farms, to one hundred or one hundred fifty acre dairy farms, to large fruit farms, to grain ranches and stock ranches, some (not many) running into thousands of acres.

The big majority of Jewish farmsteads can be classified as of the family type, that is, farms which can be operated by the farm fami-

To Refugees

Dr. Philipp Auerbach, Bavarian commissioner for victims of political and racial persecution, voiced criticism of the American attitude toward the Jewish refugees remaining in Germany. He informed a group of American Jewish business men and women who arrived at Frankfort On The Main to inspect the refugees' present lot, that contributions of "a few dollars" would not provide the answer.

His remarks were addressed to delegates of the United Jewish Appeal, whose goal for the impending drive in the U.S. is $250,000,000.

As one of the speakers at a dinner, under the auspices of the Central Committee For Liberated Jews, Dr. Auerbach condemned his impression of American nonchalance into mention of broadcasts immediately following the close of hostilities. Only terse mention was given to the distressed status of survivors of the Hitler era, he asserted, "and five minutes later the orchestra would again swing into the usual jazz."

During the war these persecuted persons, he declared, were treated like Jews "and after the war they have been treated like Germans." He maintained that vigorous action was needed to obtain equality of treatment for these unfortunates, especially in view of increasing anti-Semitism in widely separated countries.

Seeks Property To Give Fresh Start

Distribution of unclaimed and uninherited Jewish property among surviving European Jews was recommended in Paris by Milton Winn, New York lawyer, who has just completed a tour of Turkey, Greece and Czechoslovakia for the American Jewish Committee.

Mr. Winn pointed to recent Greek legislation as a model to be used in every country once occupied by the Nazis. The Greek Government has agreed to turn over uninherited Jewish property to a special foundation that in turn will use any profits from the exploitation of such property to aid Greek Jews.

He explained that the Greek law will go into effect as soon as a royal decree creates an administration foundation. Premier Themistocles Sophoulis, Mr. Winn said, had given him his "personal assurance and guarantee" that the decree would be issued shortly.

The American Jewish Committee envoy pointed out that redistribution of unclaimed Jewish property in Europe's few remaining Jews would do no more than give them restitution of Jewish property was going along in all liberated countries except in the Soviet Zone because the "Russians simply don't believe in the principle of the restitution of private property."

lies with a minimum of hired help, and where products are raised both for home consumption and for the market. Farm tenancy is almost non-existent, probably because the Jew values ownership so strongly that he is willing to assume a debt burden, if that be necessary, to acquire a piece of earth, small though it may be, which he can call his very own.

By and large, Jewish farmers are no better and no worse than other farmers. There are shining successes and there are dismal failures. On the whole they are just average. But it is only fair to say that there is hardly a branch of farming in which some Jews have not attained top rank.

The Society's basic philosophy holds that the family farm constitutes the backbone of American agriculture. If farming is a way of life, it is only under the family system that this way of life has the possibility of bringing maximum satisfaction to its practitioners. Despite the growth of corporation farming, the bulk of our foodstuffs is still raised on the six million privately operated farms. Farmers working their own farms, in the midst of their own family circles, have a pride, a dignity and a feeling of personal freedom which farm laborers for absentee landlords lack.

For nearly a half a century The Jewish Agricultural Society has labored to establish families on farms where they could work with the comforting consciousness that they are the molders of their own destinies. By no stretch of the imagination can a mass movement of Jews to the soil be envisaged, but the stronger the agricultural base of American Jewry, the stronger will be the house resting upon it.

ORT TRAINS MANY IN ITALY

ORT ended its first year of operation in Italy. During that time it was responsible for the graduation of more than 400 Jews from trade schools and training workshops. In all, 2,100 Jewish displaced persons now are learning trades in eighty-four schools either managed or partly financed by the organization in Italy.

All the students reside in International Refugee Organization camps and in many cases travel for hours to attend the schools. This year's goal of the Organization for Reconstruction and Training is to create many training schools and to provide facilities for 3,000 displaced persons who, after finishing their courses, either will go to Palestine or will emigrate to other countries.

Open U.S. Ad Drive On Bias

Advertising in 1948 will become a powerful tool for mass education in the fight on racial and religious intolerance, it was predicted by officials of the Advertising Council, as the council announced its latest public welfare campaign — the "United America" program.

"Every means of advertising which could possibly be useful will be mobilized in this fight against prejudice," said Lee Bristol, vice-president of Bristol-Myers and co-ordinator of the campaign. "Some of the best brains in the advertising profession have donated their time and talent to the design of [illegible]

Through [illegible] we will use advertising in newspapers, magazines, over the air, in outdoor display panels, subway car cards."

The council sent to 76,000 persons in newspapers and organizations the proofsheets of the opening set of advertisements. These are sponsored by newspapers themselves, or paid for by business firms or organizations interested in community welfare and inter-racial education and co-operation.

"It is obvious that many advertisers and newspapers will use our opening series merely for inspiration, and will go ahead and write their own advertisements on these themes," Mr. Bristol said.

Keynote of the campaign is expressed in these words in some of the ads:

1. Accept—or reject—people on their individual worth.
2. Don't listen to, or spread rumors against a race or a religion.
3. Speak up, wherever we are, at home, in business, in our school, church or social groups, against prejudice, for understanding.

Policy, theme and actual wording of campaign slogans and other material were done in co-operation with leading organizations working in the inter-racial field, and have been approved by educators, psychologists and representative leaders of organizations working on perfecting America's democracy. Copy was prepared by volunteer agencies.

Observes Help To Czech Jews

Large-scale relief and rehabilitation assistance provided to many of the 56,000 remaining Jews in Czechoslovakia with funds raised through the United Jewish Appeal has been a vital factor in reconstruction, according to Mrs. Ernest G. Wadel, of Dallas, Texas, chairman of the National Women's Division of the $250,000,000 Appeal, who is now in Prague.

Mrs. Wadel, who is studying living conditions among Jewish survivors in France, Italy, Poland, and Czechoslovakia, reported that the Joint Distribution Committee, with funds received from the United Jewish Appeal, is providing supplementary food rations, direct relief, housing, education and vocational training to more than 8,000 Jews in Czechoslovakia. She urged that increased assistance be made available to the Czech Jewish community to assure its "complete economic recovery."

Pope Gives Audience To U. S. Jews

Pope Pius XII told twenty-eight members of the overseas delegation of the United Jewish Appeal during a special audience that he was seriously concerned over the fate of Jewish children and anxious to spare no effort for their welfare. At the same time he praised the efforts of the organization to relieve the suffering of the Jewish people in Europe and Palestine.

"This is not the first group of your much-tried people we have been pleased to receive here at the home and hearth of the Christian family," the Pontiff said. "We welcome the opportunity of your visit to tell you once more how deeply our paternal heart has been moved by the manifestations of gratitude for what we are able and so happy to do to lighten the burdens of your people, among so many others, in the dark days of the war.

"The commission which God has given us opens our heart to the sufferings of all His children and more especially today are we eager to save the little ones who so sorely need a father's protection and care and assistance. They were always so dear to the heart of Christ.

"We gladly invoke the blessing of God most high on all the charitable endeavors you may undertake in His name. May His grace and love help all men to purge this most divine human sentiment and duty of all that could be unworthy of its author, and thus bring peace back soon to His great human family and ours."

The delegation, composed of leading business men and community members from sixteen cities in the United States, is making a tour of several European countries to study the Jewish displaced-persons problems in behalf of the United Jewish Appeal, which this year is seeking to raise $250,000,000 for the relief of distressed Jews. The delegation has already visited France, Germany and Italy and is scheduled to leave for Palestine shortly.

The ORT training workshop for weaving in Brussels teaches the manufacturing of the most elegant highest quality fabrics for women's and for children's dresses. Several graduates are now producing these specialities in their own workshops. For the coming new training period numerous new pupils have been admitted. Apart from the training workshop for weaving, the ORT school has a training workshop for mechanical knitting, where the manufacturing of mass production articles is taught.

The British Government awarded "honors for distinguished service and gallantry" to 31 members of the naval boarding parties which intercepted Jewish immigrant ships off Palestine.

Cards Of Thanks

Harry and Phillip Levine, 287 Crawford Street, wish to thank their many friends and relatives for their kindness and expressions of sympathy during their recent sad bereavement in the loss of their dear mother, Sarah Levine.

IN MEMORIAM

ROTSTEIN — In loving memory of my dear husband, Archie Rotstein, who passed away February 24, 1941.

Please God, just let my hubby know,
That his wife down here misses him so,
And finds the time long since he went,
But tries very hard to be brave and content.
Sadly missed and always remembered by his loving wife, Yetta.

Unique Show At Samovar

Dance Team and Magician Top Unusually Fine Bill

THE new floor show at the Samovar, although it is bound to entertain everybody who goes to see it, will appeal especially to the discriminating, for Carol is this time presenting three acts which stimulate the intelligence as well as tickle the senses and stir the emotions. And even the fourth act, which is along more familiar lines, is unusual for the remarkably clever way in which it is presented.

Not since the Van Gronns were last at the Samovar has Carol had such a highly individualized team as Greb and Lober. Young, good-looking, perfectly matched and dancing brilliantly with complete co-ordination, this fascinating team presents the exotic dances of other countries translated into modern choreographic terms. They take the dances of Java, Bali, Brazil and Haiti and re-create them into sharply-etched, fast-moving, exciting numbers. Their costumes are as unique as their dances.

FOR the first time in its long history, the Samovar is presenting a magician. But Jean Poiason, just over from Paris, is no ordinary magician. Not for him the routine card tricks and general stock-in-trade of the cabaret prestidigitator. He performs at least two phenomenal feats of necromancy which alone would make him outstanding and his act is enhanced by his earnest mien and his delightfully quaint English.

There are two singers and both are well above average. Joan Mandalik, who was last in Montreal to sing in "The Marriage of Figaro" under Sir Thomas Beecham, has a gorgeous contralto voice of almost Marian Anderson proportions. She opens with one of her hit songs from the Broadway operetta about Tchaikovsky, "Music in My Heart," in which she starred, and goes on to sing, most successfully, operatic arias, torch songs and ballads. An accomplished heritage, Dan Dennis who sings in the men's popular role, is a complete lesson in how to present songs on the cabaret floor. His material is good, his orchestration well arranged and every mannerism and vocal nuance carefully thought out and best presented with studied nonchalance. And never has the Samovar orchestra been so well handled when Jean Wilk has not conducted it.

An excellent and unusual show to which Bill Skinner's orchestra does full justice.

Sydney Johnson.

Sanctuaries

"And let them make me a sanctuary that I may dwell among them." — Exodus 25:8.

While our forefathers were yet on their way toward the promised land, there came to them the divine behest to build the tabernacle. The tabernacle was a portable synagogue. What was the purpose of the tabernacle? Surely God is everywhere, and He needs no special abode. The greatest of Jewish commentators interpret the tabernacle as a symbol. Through it the people of Israel are to learn to live in accordance with the law of holiness, and realise spiritually. Hence, when the people will discipline themselves God will, indeed, "dwell among them" as is so explicitly stated in the biblical injunction.

Faithful to this command, Jews have thus become Temple builders. In Palestine, they erected the Temple at Shio. In the tenth century B.C.E. came into being the magnificent Temple of Solomon with its magnificent ritual. When in 586 B.C.E. this Temple was destroyed, there arose in Babylon the greatest institution of Judaism, the Synagogue, in which laymen, and not priests came to play a most important role. And when the second Temple was demolished by the Romans, and Palestine lay in ruins, the Synagogue became the fortress of Jewish life.

Wherever Jews marched throughout the globe in all their wanderings, there marched with them the Synagogue. And during the 1900 years of Galut, it has been the Synagogue that made for Israel's survival. Thus, the Synagogue is the central institution of Jewish life. All other Jewish organizations have meaning as long as the sanctuary is a living institution disciplining the Jew to live the Jewish way of life.

A Talmudic sage long ago declared: "He who lives in a community where there is a Synagogue and does not frequent it, is a bad neighbour." By that, of course, is meant to convey that each and every Jew must practice communal responsibility. In Judaism, the community and its needs are paramount. When an individual seeks to live selfishly, he stands condemned. Most of Jewish prayers are of a communal expression. Hear "us", forgive "us" — the first person plural is repeated again and again, ever indicating the importance of neighbourliness and communal responsibility.

The modern Synagogue is aiming to continue in the synagogue tradition of the centuries. Today the living Temple is not only a house of prayer, but also a great force for Jewish culture or Torah, and a communal institution. It is a pity that, due to a process of secularization from which all of life suffers today, Jewish laymen, in too large numbers, have come to neglect the sanctuary. They will give their energies to all sorts of secular movements, and neglect the source spring of Jewish living. Without the Synagogue and all it represents, Jews are but Semites and their place among the peoples of the earth has no great and significant purpose. The Synagogue is the very symbol which eloquently speaks to Jew and non-Jew that Israel is the witness of God and the bearer of that mission dramatised in the story of Sinai. If Jews but return to their sanctuary, and live the religious life, they are indeed invincible.

The good Jew seldom indulges in talking about anti-Semitism. He fears not because he walks in the way of holiness which gives him dignity and above all, a sense of self-reverence, and respect. It is far the most part the de-Judaized Jew who is ever seeking to be an amateur Gentile, who is always jittery as to his status, and transmits thus an inferiority complex to his children.

The greatest threat to modern Jewish life is not the anti-Semite, but the indifferent Jew who lives not the Jewish religious heritage. He, indeed, is a menace to himself and to the community where he dwells. The call of the hour is for Jews to return to religion as symbolized by the Synagogue in all its historic grandeur and beauty.

Next to the Synagogue, another abode of the Jewish spirit has ever been the Jewish home. What a classic sanctuary the Jewish home has ever constituted! Here affection and reverence reigned supreme. Here parents have ever been priests and children acolytes, ministering at the house altar. Who, having memories of classical Jewish homes, will ever want to forget the beauty of the Sabbath and the glory of the festival observance? Through these dramatic festival observances the Jewish family life has ever been sanctified. And no matter what hurts were inflicted upon the Jew in the world without, in his home the Jew was king. No wonder that the bonds of love between Jewish parents and children proved ever strong.

Home is the laboratory where ideals taught by synagogue and church are put into practice. But the family institution and home itself are threatened in the present crisis. Perhaps living as we do in a world of such tremendous changes, the home and family are also changing. That there is so much of divorce in modern society may be also due to the fact that marriages are on the increase. However, whatever explaining we may attempt, for multitudes home is just a dwelling place.

If the home sanctuary is to be restored family prayer at family altars will have to be re-instituted. Observances of religious festivals will have to be restored. A religious home need not be unattractive. Parents need not display long faces as proof of spirituality. True, spirituality consists of solemn joy. Many a drift from religion has been due to home life, where children felt religious experiences to be unattractive, and perfunctory in observances. Blessed is that home, where parents are enlightened and follow ritual in terms of the poetic.

Blind observances have often driven youth out of the home, and out of the faith. Liberal Judaism, reverencing the old Jewish ritual has added in our day new ceremonies, as well as re-interpreted the old in order to strengthen home and Synagogue life. We must return to Synagogue and home, these two sanctuaries, so that we may come to know the holiness of life, its beauty, and its joy. For through the twilight of these sanctuaries we rise above animal existence, and enter into communion with that dwells within us.

U.S. ARMS POLICY

to prevent implementation of the U. N. decision:

"The British government has refused to permit the U. N. commission to go to Palestine until a week before the mandate is terminated in May. It refused to free a port area in the territory of the Jewish state and blockades all parts not only against refugees but also against shipments of desperately needed arms and equipment. It refused to permit the establishment of the armed militia as provided in the U.N. resolution. It will neither prevent the Arabs from securing arms not permit the Jews to arm themselves. Worst of all, it is deliberately permitting armed bands of Arabs, with full equipment and supplies to cross into Palestine from neighboring states. Thousands have entered already under the eyes and noses of the British authorities. In certain cases they were apprised in advance of the approach of such armed bands, but ignored such warnings."

Representative Franklin J. Maloney, Republican, of Pennsylvania, a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, told the 800 conferees that the reaction if the United States government to the present situation in the Holy Land is "a most reprehensible attitude of coolness . . . an attitude of straddling the issue." He charged that "nothing has been done by President Truman and his subordinate officials to smooth the way for the carrying out of the decision."

"We might have used our friendly relations with Great Britain, with whose government we are so closely linked," Mr. Maloney said, "to represent to it the need to conform with the United Nations recommendations, to allow an increase of Jewish immigration into Palestine, to open the port of Tel Aviv for the influx of immigrants, arms and civilian supplies. We have not done so. We must have put the question of acts of aggression, now brazenly perpetrated in Palestine, before the Security Council of the United Nations, as we have put the questions of Greece, Iran, Korea and other countries before the United Nations. We have not done so. We might have relied on the [illegible] American tradition in particular individual American citizens who voluntarily feel like joining the fight for just causes to go abroad without hindrance and encouraged by the best hopes and wishes of the American people, as we have done in the cases of those who had gone from this country to help defend England, France and Finland and many free countries in their hour of stress. We have not done so."

An eye-witness report of the situation in Palestine was given at the conference by Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, chairman of the American section of the Jewish Agency for Palestine and chairman of the American Zionist Emergency Council. He reported that the [illegible] of the United Nations during "have mobilized for a last determined attack," and declared that "it now remains to see whether the friends of the plan and those who voted for it will yield to intimidation and threat or will rally to maintain the authority of the United Nations."
